

Hi,

I'm Emma, I am an ordained Baptist minister, and I have over 20 years' experience in ministry, chaplaincy, casework, and community-based roles, both in Australia and the UK. As a result, I bring a broad and practical perspective to supervision. My background includes pastoral leadership, interim ministry, parachurch work, church planting, and leadership roles in both faith-based and secular settings.

I offer supervision in both face-to-face in Northern NSW and online formats, providing flexible support wherever you are located.

I see supervision as an act of hospitality and I'm passionate about creating safe, confidential spaces where people can reflect on their work, identity, context and values. I believe we lead and care best when we come from a place of authenticity, and I value the power of listening, and walking alongside others.

Whatever role you are in, whether you are just starting out or have been involved in ministry for a while, it's a privilege to support your growth and wellbeing through reflective supervision and I'd love to have a chat with you about how we can work together.
